COURSES TAUGHT

2016

Independent study in Social Work - SW 780

Independent study in Behavioral Science - BSC 790

2015

Human Behavior and Change Theories in Social Work Practice - SW 783

Doctoral level course taught seminar-style in two sections - one for students from Arabic-speaking Islamic country and the other for American students. This course examines a variety of explicit and implicit theories regarding pathologies and the ways in which the pathologies can be intervened. Theories used include evolution psychiatry, social gradient effects, social cognition theory, trauma theories, and existential theory.

Social Welfare Policy Analysis. SW782

Doctoral level course, taught seminar-style using Marmot, Wilkinson & Pickett, Sen, Rawls, Nussbaum and Axel Honneth with focus on inequality as the core contributing factor to poor health, lower life expectancy and poorer wellbeing. The course takes the research in inequality as the 'diagnosis' of human disorder then uses Rawls, Honneth, Sen & Nussbaum as alternative frameworks for examining the justice of social institutions affecting social work populations of interest.
